SEVERE WEATHER PREPAREDNESS

As we move further into Georgia's severe weather season, it is important to remember to always "Be Ready" for what may come along. Every year, we face strong and severe thunderstorms across the North Georgia region. Some of these storms can include large hail, destructive winds, heavy rainfall, and high-frequency, cloud-to-ground lightning. Each of these hazards can pose a direct threat to our campus community. As such, we should each take necessary precautions and be prepared for these severe weather events.

The National Weather Service provides continuously updated weather information. They also provide tips on what to do when thunderstorms threaten our area. The National Weather service recommends postponing outdoor events when severe weather threatens and to stay away from conductive objects during a storm, such as telephone lines, metal pipes, and metal fencing. If you are caught outdoors in a thunderstorm, seek shelter indoors immediately. Do not shelter under trees, in sheds, or in a convertible vehicle. These areas do not protect you from many of the hazards that may occur.

At Kennesaw State, we have pre-determined the best sheltering areas within each building. While these areas are not always ideal, they do provide the best protection available during severe weather. Most likely, these sheltering areas would only be necessary during a Tornado Warning, but it is important to remember that some thunderstorms can produce wind gusts comparable to or greater than weak tornadoes. The Office of Emergency Management works hard to keep the campus community, and Crisis Coordinators in particular, aware of impending severe weather threats.

Choose an emergency contact person outside your area because it may be easier to call long distance than locally after a local/regional disaster.

Take a minute now to call or e-mail an out-of-town friend or family member to ask him or her to be designated in the event of an emergency. Be sure to share the contact's phone number with everyone in the family. During an emergency, you can call your contact who can share with other family members where you are, how you are doing, and how to get in contact with you.
